All:

As the semester draws to an end, it seems like a good time to provide a brief update on our self-study progress. First of all, I think we are right on target with the work that has been completed to date. Within the next month, we will be finishing the rough draft and getting that out to our "editors." I have enjoyed working with the self-study steering committee comprised of the dimension co-chairs and additional committee chairs. In addition, we (the Self-Study Steering Committee) appreciate the hours and efforts that have been devoted by the members of all of the committees. We will plan on sharing highlights from the overall self-study at our in-service in August. We want to make sure that everyone understands the process and the purpose of our seeking re-accreditation. As we are still in the process of gathering evidence for our resource rooms, we may be visiting with some of you to provide documents such as meeting minutes, procedures, or other pertinent materials.

On our EWC home web page, we have a link on the right to the PEAQ Self-Study, or you can click on the following link:

<http://ewc.wy.edu/data/peaq/index.cfm>

If you visit the link, you will see a landing page that has a brief paragraph about our process and pictures of some "postcards" of the various committees with tidbits about accreditation on the 2nd page of each. Our college will be visited by a team of four individuals representing The Higher Learning Commission on October 25-27, 2010. You will have an opportunity to visit with team members during that visit.

Our last steering committee meeting was held on Tuesday of this week, and we all agreed that I should send an email that expresses our appreciation for your work and contributions to these efforts.

We hope you have a good summer and will keep you informed of our progress as we finish writing the self-study, populating the electronic and physical resource rooms, and preparing for our team visit.
